Naturally . . . the place to meet

Long a family favorite for affordable summer vacations and relaxing weekend getaways, Hungry Mother State Park is known for its beautiful woodlands and pristine lake in the heart of the mountains of southwest Virginia. But hidden in the park's hemlock-shaded back roads is a nationally acclaimed full-service meeting facility, Hemlock Haven Conference Center.

Hungry Mother State Park

The natural alternative to the noise and confusion of a major metropolis, Hemlock Haven offers meeting space, overnight accommodations, banquet facilities – everything you need to make your retreat, reunion, meeting, conference, wedding or banquet one they'll never forget.

Ferrell Hall offers three universally accessible multi-use meeting rooms, audiovisual equipment, mini-kitchen and the secluded serenity found only in a Virginia State Park.

The Redbud Room an intimate meeting place for 20 people. The Dogwood Room, with its peaked ceiling and sun-drenched openness, is a popular site for business and civic club meetings and can accommodate up to 50.

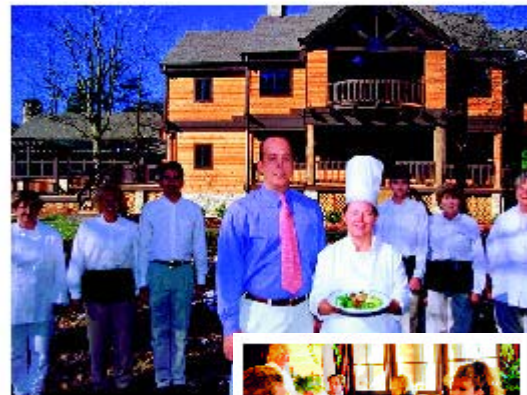

The Rhododendron Room can host 375 people for a reception and has banquet services for up to 250. The large fireplace and wildlife murals make this a special place for your big event.

Overnight accommodations are available in comfortable, climate-controlled lodges and cabins. Guests can choose from cabins that sleep up to six and offer fully equipped kitchens or a lodge that can accommodate up to eight.

Hemlock Haven can accommodate up to 78 people, and 20 additional cabins elsewhere in the park may be available. Hungry Mother State Park also has campsites for the more adventurous visitors.

“The Restaurant” at Hungry Mother has an award-winning chef, room for more than 300 people in four different dining areas and beautiful views of Hungry Mother Lake. Originally constructed in 1937, the modern renovations accent the beautiful wood interiors while the decor and decorations reflect the park's rich history.

The newly renovated Hungry Mother Lodge offers all the modern conveniences, but this historic hand-hewn log cabin, built by the Civilian Conservation Corps, is breathtaking in its simple splendor. A mountain villa with a Southwest Virginia flavor, the lodge can accommodate up to 16 in six bedrooms. Why watch the satellite television when you can spend hours on the porch relaxing in a hand-made rocking chair?

But there's more to Hemlock Haven than just meetings. Hemlock Haven visitors have full access to the park's swimming beach, canoes, pontoon boats and boat launch, universally accessible fishing pier, horseshoes, hiking and biking trails, and island amphitheater.

Lighted tennis courts and team-building group activities including softball, basketball, volleyball and a bonfire pit are available exclusively for Hemlock Haven visitors.

Night hikes and canoe tours, weekly concerts and special children's programs all make Hemlock Haven and Hungry Mother State Park ideal for the entire family.
